From the Dean's Office

It is a distinct privilege for me to serve as Dean of the College of Business and Technology (CBT). My husband and I were born and raised in Northeast Oklahoma and are excited to be back in Green Country. As part of Northeastern State University, the College of Business and Technology and its faculty focus on effective classroom teaching, scholarship and service.

We seek to build partnerships with business and industry. Our extensive network of successful and dedicated graduates today serves in every venue of business and industry, both in the public and private sector. In my short time here, I have witnessed the respected reputation of NSU as witnessed from several generations of alumni. The CBT not only “knows the business world,” but is part of shaping it through the work of our graduates.

In addition to offering our students a wide variety of learning opportunities outside the classroom, our curriculum represents deep connections and partnerships in the academic and business world. Our students can build their expertise with relevant undergraduate majors in Accounting, Finance, Business Administration, Management, Health Care Administration, Environmental Health and Safety Management, Information Systems, Technology, Marketing, Supply Chain Management and Hospitality and Tourism Management. With multiple degree programs from which to choose, our students can literally shape not only their academic preparation but also the fields into which they will ultimately matriculate. Our faculty strive to keep the curriculum relevant by staying abreast of business and industry workforce needs regionally, nationally and internationally.

We offer a superb faculty balanced between academic excellence and real world experience, as well as Master of Accounting and Financial Analysis (MAFA), Master of Business Administration (MBA), and the Professional Master of Business Administration (PMBA). The MAFA program is designed for students interested in advancing these two fields or preparing for the CPA, CMA or DFA certification exams. The MBA is designed for the working professional, while the PMBA is designed for professionals who has worked in the industry for at least three years beyond their undergraduate program.

If you hunger to “succeed in the business world,” come join us and help shape the business scene for the better in the years and decades to come. We are waiting for you ... at NSU’s College of Business and Technology. I look forward to meeting and getting to know each of you.

Dean Janet Buzzard

Tozzio named Lifetime Fellow of the American College of Healthcare Executives

Mark Tozzio, a retired administrator of 37 years, teaches healthcare administration courses to students in the U.S. and internationally as a part of the NSU Continuing Education Department.

He recently published a 400 page book titled, Why the United States Healthcare System Should be a Limited Human Right for All. He has also worked with Dr. Eloy Chavex, dean of NSU's College of Extended Learning, to develop a growing CEU program from healthcare managers around the world.

The American College of Healthcare Executives is the leading international professional association for healthcare managers.

The requirements to become a fellow are stringent, including an examination by the Board of ACHE, at least ten years of experience in healthcare administration, attainment of an advanced degree in healthcare, and recommendations by peers.

To be appointed as a lifetime fellow, candidates must have been an accomplished fellow for several years and have significant career milestones behind them. They must have made contributions to the profession, have earned continuing education credits for recertification and be retired full-time employment in the health services field.

The honor of Lifetime Fellow of the American College of Healthcare Executives is awarded to only a fraction of fellows worldwide, and Tozzio said he is proud to be among them.

"Achievement of the LFACHE status demonstrates to my students and colleagues that I represent the highest standards of ethical management practices and a commitment to ongoing development of the healthcare management profession worldwide," said Tozzio.

Chavez said Tozzio is a great asset to NSU. "Mark is an extraordinary, intelligent individual who has developed domestic and international markets interested in enhancing Healthcare Administration at the executive level," Chavez said. "His passion for his students to learn both on the credit side and continuing education side has placed NSU on the map for quality Healthcare Administration cutting edge knowledge and information."

CBT office at Tulsa Community College

Susan Chitwood and Kacy Brown, Academic Advisors in the College of Business and Technology at the Broken Arrow campus, began holding regular office hours at the Tulsa Community College, South-east campus over the summer. They are currently alternating availability at the NSU office at TCC once a week to be available to TCC students who are looking to transfer to NSU and pursue degrees in the College of Business and Technology. Susan and Kacy are meeting with TCC students to answer their questions about CBT's degree programs and to pre-advise them on degree requirements and the transfer process.

Along with maintaining these regular office hours, Susan and Kacy have also recently participated in NSU at TCC days on both the Metro and Southeast Campuses of TCC. At these two events, TCC students that are exploring possibly transferring to NSU were able to meet with Academic Advisors from each of the colleges here at NSU. This was a great opportunity to speak with TCC students about the degree options available to them within the College of Business and Technology and to give them information on how to complete the transfer process.

CBT professor reviews book on taxation disputes

Dr. Fritz Laux reviewed States, American Indian Nations, and Intergovernmental Politics, a book on taxation disputes between states and Native American tribes. This was written by Anne Boxberger Flaherty, a political scientist from Merrimack College in Maryland, who Laux met through his work (with Stefanie Buckskin of OU) on cigarette taxation in Oklahoma. Oklahoma's history of cigarette taxation is widely discussed in the book and Laux predicts that States, American Indian Nations, and Intergovernmental Politics will be "mandatory reading" for lawyers and politicians working on compacts, and other state-tribal controversies in our state. It's published by Routledge and available in hardcover or ebook.

Professor teams up with local business on case study

Dr. Nayer Naseem, PhD developed a case study, based on a local business in cooperation with Mr. Brian Cho-jnaki (Owner, Sooner Plant Farm). Invited the business owner to CBT for interaction with students and meeting the leadership team of the college/ department. The written case titled below with an abstract being readied to be sent to MIT Sloan Management Review to be considered for publication.

Title: SOONER PLANT FARM: WHEN NATURE AND TECHNOLOGY CONVERGE TO SYNERGISE A SMALL BUSINESS

Abstract: Brian Chojnacki, owner of the Sooner Plant Farm (SPF), a small business located near Tahlequah, Okla-homa, USA, is facing some challenges as his online outdoor plant retail business is growing. He is deliberating upon how to add more resources, add value to his offerings, increase return on investment, and improve his customers' experience. Brian started SPF as a wholesale outdoor landscaping plants grow-ing and selling business, about eighteen years ago, and his business has grown many folds, particularly, with the use of web-based online retailing since 2004. In fact, today, all SPF's orders are booked online and shipped via UPS ground all over the United States. The unique selling proposition of SPF is the vari-ety of outdoor plants it offers, many of them exotic, branded, and hard to find, which allows SPF to charge a price premium. Brian wants to nurture his business further in terms of volume, assortment, and reach, but at the same time do not want to compromise on the quality of his offerings, and customer sat-isfaction. This case discusses the challenges his business faces today, what he is doing to handle these issues, what additional resources might be needed for successful business outcomes and sustained growth of his business in the future, and what else can be done to take the business to the next desired level.

CBT SPOTLIGHT

CBT healthcare program takes a bold step

The healthcare administration team would like to welcome Dr. Wallace as he brings years of experience in healthcare as an administrator and practitioner to the program.

College of Business and Technology in a bold move is transforming the Bachelor of Science in Healthcare Administration to the more versatile Bachelors of Business Administration.

Healthcare Administration changes daily and the HCA students must adapt, adjust and modify to meet the professional demands and needs of the industry as future leaders. Dr. Wallace provides insight and support to continue the growth and development of the prosperous HCA degree. Healthcare Admin-istration ... a Solid Employment Opportunity! Practically every multimedia news report involves the topic of health care in some dynamic. Health care continues as a social, economic, and political influence to populations world-wide. The 'good, bad, or indifference' to the topic, is that it is a fact for all popula-tions to contend with.

Shrinking this global issue down to a matter of significance to Northeastern State University is our con-tinually evolving program in Healthcare Administration that readies graduates to rise to the challenges posed by today's complex and constantly growing health care industry. That is exactly what the College of Business and Technology contributes to in transforming the Bachelor of Science in Healthcare Ad-ministration to the more versatile Bachelors of Business Administration – Health Organizations Admin-istration; and soon to be introduced Masters of Business Administration, with emphasis areas of Healthcare Administration, Health Informatics, or Long-Term Care.

The core foundation to these dynamic degrees is preparing forward thinking healthcare leaders to confidently work in the various health care organizations, such as hospitals, clinics, private practices, long-term care facilities, rehabilitation sites, insurance companies, research and academic settings, and the many other direct or indirect health care provider's settings. NSU's proposed Health Organ-izations Administration degrees covers those critical success skills and knowledge required to be suc-cessful in today's health organizations models.

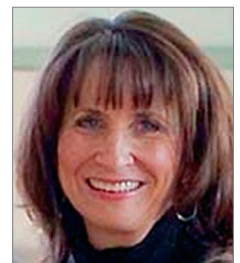

The program of study compliments our country's work to improve health care outcomes and access, while decreasing costs, by evolving from the pay-for-service model to the pay-for-performance mod-els. This shift, values organizational efficiencies and reliability. Additionally, the demographics of the aging 'Baby Boomers' that routinely require more medical care are conveniently causing an in-creased demand for highly trained healthcare leaders that drive the progression and change in the business of health care.

Moreover, the U.S. Bureau of labor Statistics (2016) projects a 19% increase in employment of medi-cal and health service managers from 2015 to 2025. This is a faster rate of growth than the predicted average of all occupations over the same decade. Healthcare is truly a rapidly growing industry with a number of job opportunities. Our degree in Health Organizations Administration prepares our Students to be the Best of the Best in this career endeavor.
